

BOMA CANADA HONOURS EXCELLENCE IN COMMERCIAL REAL ESTATE

VANCOUVER, October 10, 2003 — The Building Owners and Managers Association of Canada has announced the winners of this year's national awards in recognition of excellence in the Canadian commercial real estate industry.

The President of BOMA Canada, Margaret Dreher, RPA, offered her congratulations to the winners and to all the finalists, each of whom has already been an award winner at the local level. "BOMA Canada's national awards program recognizes the very best of the dynamic Canadian commercial real estate industry," Dreher said. "These awards acknowledge the special efforts made by those in the industry whose leadership and hard work set new benchmarks and define the shape of things to come."

Dreher presented the awards during BOMEX® 2003, BOMA Canada's annual conference and exposition, held from October 1 - 3 at the Vancouver Convention and Exhibition Centre.

The Office Building of the Year (TOBY) Awards salute the stars of the commercial real estate industry, recognizing excellence in property management, operations, resource conservation, environmental awareness, leasing and building design, customer service and innovation.

All facets of a building's operations are thoroughly evaluated during the judging process, including tenant relations programs, community involvement, emergency evacuation procedures, property management functions, maintenance programs, operating costs and control procedures, security and life safety procedures, energy management programs, environmental programs, architectural significance and appearance, and staff development programs.

The competition consists of three levels of judging: the first level of competition is at the local level, by local BOMA associations across Canada. Winning local entries then advance to the national level; and finally Canada's national winners are eligible to advance to the BOMA International competition in 2004.
